PROGRAM DESCRIPTION

As people develop memory loss, Alzheimer's disease or another form of dementia, it can be difficult to know how to connect, interact and motivate individuals. What if you had a tool that has the ability to remind, connect, soothe, motivate, distract and move people living with memory loss? Join us as we explore how to use music as a way to increase quality of life for both the person living with memory loss and those who care about them.

This full-day conference is designed to incorporate relevant research around the disease as well as strategies for a new normal and maintaining balance while caring for another.

AUDIENCE

This conference is intended for families and professional caregivers, human services and health care providers, educators and tribal leaders.

OBJECTIVES

Participants will:

- Understand latest research results around the disease
- Learn a variety of techniques to use music to improve quality of life
- Acquire strategies for the 'new normal' and maintaining balance
